International Co-Operation in Urban Development Master of Science

Brief Description

The international and interdisciplinary Master of Science in International Cooperation in Urban Development addresses the challenges of rapid urbanisation.

The internationally oriented degree course is part of the master programme Mundus Urbano, which is jointly offered by four European universities. The first two semesters take place at TU Darmstadt, while during the second half of the degree course students specialise in a specific subject of urban planning at one of the four programme-universities.
